

ACMS Mongolia Field School 2023
Letter of Reference Information

The American Center for Mongolian Studies (ACMS) is hosting an interdisciplinary Field School program in Mongolia during the summer of 2023. The Field School program is being led by experienced North American and Mongolian faculty members and will introduce students to field research techniques while exploring the culture, history and environment of Mongolia.

Applicants may submit an optional Letter of Reference to support their application for admission or to support their request for a fellowship. It is preferred that Letter of Reference is provided to the applicant as a document on institutional letterhead for submission with other application materials. If desired, the referee may email the Letter of Reference as an attachment to: mfs@mongoliacenter.org.

The Priority Application deadline is March 1, 2023, and final deadline is April 30, 2023. Letters of reference must be received before the application will be considered for program acceptance or fellowships.

In the Letter of Reference, please address as many of the following topics as possible about the applicant:

1. The applicant's maturity and self-reliance
2. Ability to work well with others in a team and interactive class setting
3. Motivation to participate in the Mongolia Field School and chosen program focus area
4. Field research experience and ability
5. Resilience necessary to participate in a field school held in rural areas of a developing country
